Shawnee County and absconded April 25. She was paroled two earlier times, on June 17 and Dec. 8.

Trusdale has been convicted of 13 offenses in three counties going back to 2004. Most of his convictions are for drug offenses, but he also has convictions for criminal damage to property, theft, burglary, violation of the Kansas Offender Registration Act, and forgery.

He was discharged to parole in Reno County Oct. 2, 2024, and absconded March 20.

Jennifer King, director of public affairs for the Department of Corrections, said the arrests might have been for something other than parole violations.

"If the U.S. marshals were involved, they could be facing charges we don't even know about," King said.

Undersheriff Larry Starkey said the sheriff's office got a call from the marshals asking they were in Peabody and saying for deputies, but the department had none to spare.

Later, the marshals brought the pair to jail. The arresting agency is not listed on the jail website and only "KDOC" is noted as the charges.

"We need to find a way forward and learn from the past," he said.

The city's two-year contract with Wells sets his annual salary at $125,000 — twice the salary paid to former administrator Brogan Jones.

If he is terminated without cause, he will be paid 120 days after termination.

He also will receive $2,000 moving expenses. Wells worked from 2012 to 2019 in public transportation at Estes Park, Colorado, and from 2019 to 2023 as general manager of RATP Dev, a regional transportation service serving Estes Park and Rocky Mountain National Park.

He has a master's degree in public administration and a post-baccalaureate certificate in homeland security. His bachelor's degree in business administration is from Emporia State University. He was born in Emporia and grew up in Olathe. Wells was hired after a closed-door session May 14.

Council members approved that ordinance as well.

Kovar said the ordinances were merely the first step toward the proposed projects and that the council could back out or change the projects at any time.

In other business, council members approved use of up to $4,500 of guest tax fund money for Marion Merchants to run a half-page ad for Marion in the 2026 Kansas Travel Guide published by the Department of Commerce. Commerce distributes 275,000 copies of the magazine at travel centers, welcome centers, travel information centers, and public places.

Matt Meyerhoff also made a presentation about Fireman's Relief, council members granted a fireworks permit to Wholesale Fireworks, and they voted to purchase $30 Chingawasa admission buttons for all 26 full-time city employees.
