Frank Wirtz, Treasurer

The cost of publishing official notices — like almost everything else — has risen, but it remains relatively small, pales in comparison to the cost of an uninformed public, and allows local government to do business with local businesses.

KNOW THE SCORE

Available. Newspaper notices aren't print or online; they're both — in print for subscribers who might not use the Internet and free on three different websites with far greater reach than city

M-45-2778

Noticed. It's not about whether people CAN read them. It's about whether they DO read them. Average people discover notices in the newspaper that they might not know to go looking for online.

Permanent. Try finding something that was posted on a website a couple of months ago. With newspapers, everything we produce is permanently and independently archived

M-45-2777

Independent. Hackers or unscrupulous employees can change online notices with a keystroke. Independent newspapers are a medium they can't control.

Reliable. Some cities' websites can't be updated because key staffers left or are away or because cybercriminals have held them hostage.
