CATCH A CLASSIC

Star of the Month: Angela Lansbury

TCM, beginning at 8 p.m.
Turner Classic Movies' monthlong Angela Lansbury celebration continues with five titles tonight. First up is In the Cool of the Day (1963), a romantic drama about a troubled couple (Lansbury and Peter Finch) whose strained marriage becomes further complicated when the husband falls for a terminally ill woman (Jane Fonda) during a trip to Greece. Following that is If Winter Comes (1947), about a man whose marriage comes under strain when his former lover returns. Next up is Dear Heart (1964), a romantic comedy about a middle-aged woman who meets a salesman at a convention and falls in love, followed by The World of Henry Orient (1964), a comedy in which Lansbury plays the mother of a girl chasing after a concert pianist (Peter Sellers). Last on the docket is Mister Buddwing (1966), a drama about an amnesiac man (James Garner) who wanders New York City trying to piece together his identity through encounters with women from his past.

ASK CAROLYN | CAROLYN HAX

Spouse can't drive anymore and expects to be driven on demand

Adapted from an online discussion.

Dear Carolyn: My spouse and I are in our early 70s, married 25 years and living in a large suburban area.

She stopped driving six months ago because of bad eyesight.

I volunteer delivering meals and at the animal shelter and serve on a county commission. I also take classes at the gym three days a week. These activities give purpose and meaning to my life in retirement.

Spouse is an introvert and doesn't want to do these things with me. Spouse doesn't understand why I have so many friends. She has no friends and thinks people don't need them – they're too much trouble.

Now she wants me to quit all my activities to be available to drive her to appointments and errands. Spouse does NOT have any other chronic illness except poor eyesight. Spends the day playing video games and watching TV.

I've said I'm available all day Mondays and before noon other days. But my spouse says she needs rides at other times. And that my schedule is too complicated.

Spouse refuses to take taxis when I'm not available, saying they're too expensive. Spouse has $10 million in investments. (We married in our late 40s and kept our finances separate.) I think spouse is being ridiculous and said she should spend the $20,000 she got for selling her car on taxi rides. She says that's a waste when I could and should be doing it.

Spouse says I'm being a bad spouse not to quit activities to care for her. She doesn't need assisted living care, she just wants free taxi service.

Suggestions for how I should navigate this?

- Frustrated Spouse

Frustrated Spouse: You are navigating this. Your response is appropriate, so stick to it: Be available at the times you said, and keep your activity schedule intact.

Firmly decline to be controlled. (Was spouse always like this? It's not okay.)

No doubt some of spouse's maladaptive decisions trace to fear and loneliness. It would be compassionate to note that, to say you sense she isn't comfortable in a taxi – older, alone, compromised vision, it fits. If so, then together you can figure out a taxi alternative; a regular car service or hired driver, for example, or your local council on aging are two places to start. She spends, learns your schedule or stays home.

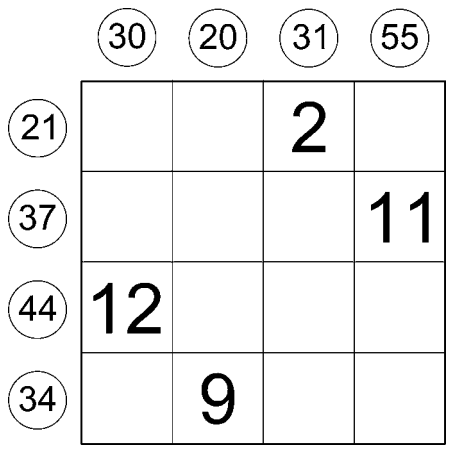

Say out loud, too, that you hear she wants companionship and will gladly make more plans with her. But not at the cost of your friendships just because she chooses not to have any of her own.

If she persists in calling you a bad spouse for this, then don't fight it. Agree: "Yep, bad spouse. This is who I am and what I am offering you: rides wherever you need for at least half of every day. And a schedule with variety because that's what keeps me happy. Remember, we're different, which brought us together."

Otherwise, be loving and kind and hold fast. Plus, the mental and physical health benefits you get from circulating will benefit your spouse, whereas if you rot at home out of guilt, then you soon won't be much good to either of you.

WHAT TO WATCH | CONTENT BY TV WEEKLY

Network broadcasting shows are listed in Eastern/Pacific Time, unless noted otherwise. Shows air one hour earlier in Central/Mountain Time. Cable broadcasting shows are listed in Eastern Time.

9-1-1
ABC, 8 p.m. • Season Premiere
The Season 8 finale saw a mix of endings and beginnings; Bobby's (Peter Krause) tragic death left viewers and his fellow first responders in shock. In Season 9, there will be some big shoes to fill in Bobby's absence as the crew attempts to move on.

Hell's Kitchen
FOX, 8 p.m.
To test their teamwork, Chef Gordon Ramsay has the remaining chefs compete in a speed breakfast challenge for local police officers in the new episode "The Heat Is Coming to Hell's Kitchen."

Law & Order
NBC, 8 p.m.
A law partner with prominent government clients is murdered, and Baxter (Tony Goldwyn) must consider making political concessions for the case to be a success in the new episode "Bend the Knee."

The Golden Bachelor
Hulu
The second season of The Golden Bachelor is available next day (Thursdays) on Hulu and Hulu on Disney+. It's the senior spin on the beloved dating reality show, with 66-year-old former NFL linebacker and lawyer Mel Owens searching for his later-in-life lover.

9-1-1: Nashville
ABC, 9 p.m. • New Series
A spinoff of 9-1-1, this Ryan Murphy-produced procedural will focus on a group of first responders – firefighters, paramedics and 911 operators – in Nashville, Tennessee. Alongside Chris O'Donnell, who plays a fire captain and rodeo rider who runs Nashville's busiest fire station with his son, and Jessica Capshaw, who plays his wife, Kimberly Williams-Paisley stars as a 911 operator who is fairly new to the job.

"9-1-1: Nashville" PROVIDED BY DISNEY

Special Forces
FOX, 9 p.m.
The recruits must communicate effectively and move quickly to identify fallen comrades in a casualty evacuation test and must cross rooftops to make it to extraction in the new episode "Warzone."

Grey's Anatomy
ABC, 10 p.m. • Season Premiere
Season 21 of the long-running medical drama ended with a bang – literally. Just as Dr. Atticus "Link" Lincoln (Chris Carmack) was about to perform surgery on a patient's leg, the hospital was rocked by an explosion. As we don't know where exactly in the building it hit (or what happened exactly), no character is safe – and this just after his wedding with Dr. Jo Wilson (Camilla Luddington), who is pregnant with twins! Talk about horrible timing. In Season 22, we may have to say our goodbyes to one or more of our favorite characters from Grey Sloan Memorial.

Greatest Mysteries Ever
Travel Channel, 10 p.m.
Tutankhamun, Egypt's teenage pharaoh, left an enduring legacy in the 10 short years he ruled. Given the lingering questions surrounding his life and untimely death, tonight's new episode revisits one of history's most fascinating enigmas.
