Schiller Named Executive Vice President at HCC

HIGHLAND COMMUNITY COLLEGE

Highland Community College has appointed Dr. Jennifer A. Schiller as executive vice president, effective immediately.

Dr. Schiller, a first-generation college graduate, brings more than 20 years of experience in higher education leadership roles. Her areas of expertise include strategic planning and change management, assessment, accreditation, technology infrastructure and data analytics.

Schiller most recently served as vice president for strategic initiatives at the College, where among many projects, she led the College’s efforts to implement a new student information system.

“Dr. Schiller’s expertise in data solutions, educational research, assessment and strategic planning make her a tremendous asset to our executive team as we drive progress for the College,” said President Vincent Bowhay. “I am confident that her experience in strategic transformation will be an asset as we build our financial strength, operational excellence, and further our deep commitment to student and employee success.”

Dr. Schiller holds a doctorate in teacher education, a master of education in general education and data literacy, and a bachelor of arts in English literature from the University of Buffalo in Buffalo, New York. Her passion for student success and college transformation can be seen in her diverse research and publication efforts as well as her service activities with Educause, the Higher Learning Commission and American Educational Research Association.

William Byrne of the Diocese of Springfield. Sister Dede graduated from Virginia Tech before being accepted to Georgetown School of Medicine and then joining the U.S. Army as a medical student on a military medical scholarship.

After three years of family medicine residency at the U.S. Army hospital in Fort Belvoir, Virginia, she served as a full-time officer for 13 months in the Sinai Peninsula, acting as a liaison between the U.S. Army and the monks of St. Catherine’s Monastery at the base of Mount Sinai.

Following her time in the Middle East, she practiced family and emergency medicine in South Korea. She served as a full-time Army officer from 1982 to 1989 and then remained in the Army Reserve until her retirement in 2009.

In 1989, Sister Dede spent a year performing missionary medicine in India and Mexico. She undertook surgical training at Georgetown University and went on to practice in Ventura, California, completing her board certification in surgery in 1999.

In 2000, she returned to Washington to discern her religious vocation where she met the Little Workers of the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary. She began her formal formation in 2002 and completed her first religious vows in 2004.

After completing her religious formation, she was given special permission from her community and the Vatican to both serve as a religious sister as well as an Army reservist for the Army Medical Corp in 2004. In three separate deployments, she served at the Walter Reed National Military Medical Center, Fort Carson in Colorado, and Afghanistan, where she cared for wounded citizens. When not serving our soldiers, she continued her service for the poor with her community in far off places like Kenya, Haiti, Sudan, and Iraq, as well as her home front in Washington, D.C.

After returning from Afghanistan, Sister Dede retired from the U.S. Army at the rank of colonel in 2009. After a full career of medical military service, she professed her final religious vows two years later.

Since then, she has found a fruitful collaboration between her religious vocation and her medical and military service. It brings Sister Dede joy to serve the sick and suffering in a religious habit, noting the special effect that it has on people. Her charitable medical service includes ministering to the wounded amongst the rubble of the twin towers following the September 11 terrorist attacks, caring for the sick in the wake of the 2011 earthquake in Haiti, and annual medical missions to Haiti and Iraq.

She currently serves as the local superior of the Washington, D.C., house of the Little Workers of the Sacred Hearts as well as the institute’s medical missions. The sisters in D.C. run a pro-bono physical therapy clinic and diabetic eye clinic and a retirement home for elderly sisters as well as abortion pill reversal.
