

Japanese boxing stars Inoue, Nakatani poised for showdown

By Ken Maguire

The Floyd Mayweather Jr.-Manny Pacquiao bout happened probably five years too late. Tyson Fury and Anthony Joshua still haven't fought. Naoya Inoue and Junto Nakatani are ready to square off now in what would be the biggest fight in Japanese boxing history. No posturing, just two top pound-for-pound boxers in their prime seemingly willing to give fans what they want.

Here's the catch: They each have one more fight and need to avoid a surprise before their expected showdown.

Inoue (31-0, 27 KOs) is the undisputed super bantamweight (122 lbs) champion and the headliner Saturday in Saudi Arabia. He faces Mexico's Alan David Picasso (32-0-1, 17 KOs). Nakatani (31-0, 24 KOs), moving up in weight to make his debut in the division, faces Sebastian Hernandez Reyes (20-0, 18 KOs) — also Mexican — on the same card, a showcase of Japanese fighters.

"This is very important for Japanese boxing," Inoue told The Associated Press through a translator. Most important for Inoue and Nakatani, though, are victories that would clear the way for a blockbuster matchup, likely in Tokyo in May. "Firstly, I have a plan to have a fight with Nakatani," Inoue said of his goals for 2026. "Also, I have the idea that I may move up to the featherweight division." The buildup to the Riyadh event, billed as the "Night of the Samurai," has been as much about Inoue-Nakatani as it has about their respective opponents Saturday. At a press event last month, promoters sat Inoue and Nakatani next to each other and made sure they were the last two off the stage during the photo session. The pair didn't exchange chitchat or handshakes. "Personally, I have no contact or connection with him," the 32-year-old Inoue said. "Of course, I value his boxing, that's why I'm looking forward to fighting him."

INOUE'S NICKNAME IS 'MONSTER'

With the retirement of Terence Crawford plus the injury layoff of undisputed heavyweight champion Oleksandr Usyk, there's a good argument that Inoue is now the top pound-for-pound boxer in the world. The 5-foot-5 (1.65 meter) Japanese star, a four-division champion, uses precision combinations plus elite speed and power to dismantle opponents. The Yokohama native has already fought three times this year, most recently a unanimous decision victory over Murodjon Akhmadaliev in September. In two of his past five fights, Inoue has overcome an early knockdown — both times from a left hook — en route to stoppage victories. Luis Nery stunned a Tokyo Dome crowd in May 2024 when he sent Inoue to the canvas in the first round. One year later, Ramon Cardenas dropped Inoue in the second round in Las Vegas. Inoue's promoters made sure the Las Vegas fight was on ESPN rather than pay-per-view to expose him to a wider US audience. Bob Arum, Inoue's promoter at Top Rank, had said he wants Inoue to reach Shohei Ohtani-level fame. Inoue himself, however, isn't so sure. "Apart from the boxing, I'm a boring person. I just focus on boxing."

PICASSO: NOTHING TO LOSE

At 5-foot-8 (1.72 meters), Picasso has height and reach advantages on Inoue, but probably not much else. Inoue is a -3000 favorite at BetMGM Sportsbook, and -700 to win by stoppage.

"The pressure is on Inoue, he needs to win," the 25-year-old Picasso told AP, also through a translator. "I have nothing to lose. Everybody expects him to win." Picasso, who has studied neuroscience at university, vowed to take Inoue's belts in what he said will be "Mexican Aztec warrior night." "I come to win. I will beat this guy. I will beat the Monster." Picasso's training team includes cardio coach Germán Silva, who twice won the New York City Marathon (1994 and '95).

NAKATANI FOLLOWING INOUE'S PATH

Just like Inoue, the 27-year-old Nakatani has been collecting world titles as he's progressed through weight categories. The three-division champion vacated his two belts at bantamweight to move from 118 lbs to 122 lbs. "I feel I have gained power and speed as well," he told AP. Nakatani, nicknamed "Big Bang," said he's not overlooking his 25-year-old Mexican opponent: "He has a strong punch and he's very strong-willed." Nakatani's goal for 2026 is pretty simple. "I'm going to be the champion at super bantamweight."

HOW TO WATCH

The event at the 22,000-capacity Mohammed Abdo Arena is available pay per view on DAZN with a subscription. The ring walk for Inoue's fight is expected to be just before 4 p.m. local time (1 p.m. London, 8 a.m. ET), which is 10 p.m. in Japan. Nakatani's bout is scheduled to begin about 70 minutes before Inoue's fight.

scored touchdowns in overtime, with the Raiders failing in Week 9 against Jacksonville and Washington missing in Week 13 against Denver. There have been 14 OT games in all this season, with only one lasting longer than two drives. Dallas and the New York Giants combined for five possessions in Week 2 before the Cowboys won 40-37 on a field goal. Four were decided when the team that started with the ball scored first and the second team couldn't match, and four others where the team that got the ball first failed to score and then allowed a game-winning score on the next drive. There was also one tie in Week 4 when Dallas made a field goal on the opening possession and Green Bay used the rest of the 10-minute period on a drive that ended with a game-tying field goal.

TANK BOWL

The "showdown" between the NFL's only two-win teams when Las Vegas hosts the New York Giants on Sunday will be a rarity — and an important game when it comes to draft order. This will be just the fourth time since the 1970 NFL-AFL merger, according to Sportradar, that the two teams with sole possession of the worst two records in the league meet in a game in the final two weeks. The loser of the game Sunday in Las Vegas will "win" the right to pick first with another loss in Week 18, with a potential prize of Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback Fernando Mendoza or the chance to trade down for a haul of picks. The previous three late-season showdowns for the top pick didn't provide a great prize to the team that ended up No. 1. In 1981, New England lost the season finale to Baltimore and ended up with defensive lineman Kenneth Sims, who had 17 sacks in eight seasons and never made a Pro Bowl. In 1980, the winless Saints beat the three-win Jets in Week 15 after already clinching the top pick in the draft. New Orleans picked running back George Rogers, who had a solid career, but wasn't nearly as good as the three Hall of Fame defenders who went in the top eight of that draft: Lawrence Taylor, Kenny Easley and Ronnie Lott. The first time it happened came in 1971 when Buffalo lost to Houston in Week 15 to clinch the top pick. The Bills took defensive lineman Walt Patulski, who lasted just five seasons. TRIPLE-THREAT TAYSON New Orleans' jack-of-all-trades Taysom Hill reached an exclusive mark when he caught a 7-yard pass from Tyler Shough in the fourth quarter on Sunday against the Jets to give him 1,002 yards receiving in his career. Hill already had topped the 1,000-yard mark as both a passer and runner and became the first player in the Super Bowl era with 1,000 yards in each. Hill capped his day by throwing a 38-yard touchdown pass to Chris Olave and now has 2,551 yards rushing and 2,426 yards passing to go with his receiving mark. Three players reached the triple-1,000 club in the pre-Super Bowl era, with Bob Hornschemeyer, Charley Trippi and George Taliaferro all doing it in careers that ended in 1955. But no one had come particularly close since the start of the Super Bowl era in 1966, with no other player recording at least 660 yards in each category. The closest any previous player came was Kordeell Stewart, who easily surpassed the passing and rushing marks but finished with 658 yards receiving. Terrelle Pryor had at least 1,500 yards passing and receiving but finished with only 646 as a runner.
