

Haysville Memories

8 Years Ago

Campus High School graduate Marissa Sullivan spoke up after students disrupted a Kansas State University pre-game football ritual Saturday. When students started a vulgar chant, the K-State marching band stopped playing, in the middle of the “Wabash Cannonball.” Once the music stopped, a video board in the football stadium played a pre-recorded message from head football coach Bill Snyder, asking students not to use the chant in the future.

More than 60 people gathered at Haysville’s City Hall last Thursday to hear what folks from elsewhere thought of the city. Three people from Arkansas City toured Haysville as part of K-State Research and Extension’s First Impressions program. The visitors filled out surveys, and Extension employee Nancy Knopp Daniels documented the tour in photographs.
