Guest Note of History

Most Important Conversation in History

Sherill Sheldon

Albert Einstein talked to Franklin D. Roosevelt. He said - "The Germans are working on a nuclear bomb. This will cause the largest explosion in history". FDR knew he was telling the truth.

FDR spent more money on this project than any other project by any president had spent on a single project.

The Germany war ended before they could make their bomb. However they sent their information and radio active material to Japan as they were still fighting.

Finally the US made two nuclear bombs and dropped them on Japan which caused that war to end.

One question - did we have more bombs ready to go? No, we did not, but in a few days we would have produced more. And three more every month after that.

What I just found out last year. The Japanese had exploded a nuclear bomb before the war was over. And they had a plan to put a nuclear bomb on a submarine and send it to San Francisco and explode it.

That was going to happen 12 days after we bombed Heroshima. Its a good thing Harry Truman did not hesitate to bomb Japan when he did.

This information can be checked on online. The history I learned in school is not even close to correct.
