Breathe Better Today
With Free Asthma
Resources and Support

(StatePoint) Asthma is a lifelong, chronic lung disease. However, for the 27.8 million people impacted in the United States, proper disease management can help them lead active lives. To ensure that adults with asthma and the parents of children with asthma have the support they need to best manage their disease and emotional wellbeing, the American Lung Association is now offering a new comprehensive suite of programs. Focused on helping those with asthma improve their quality of life and maintain an active lifestyle with the disease, the free initiative includes three main components: Support: As a part of the program, people can connect with Lung Health Navigators — registered nurses, respiratory therapists, certified asthma educators and certified tobacco treatment specialists, who provide free, personalized support, guidance and resources. Lung Health Navigators meet with people one-on-one to answer questions about asthma techniques, provide educational resources, help them navigate insurance challenges, link them with support group connections and much more. These sessions are unlimited, and can happen over the phone, via live online chat, or with video calls when it works best for the participant’s schedule. Education: Participants get access to the proven Breathe Well, Live Well course, which is the Lung Association’s premier asthma self-management program for adults and for parents of children with asthma. The evidence-based curriculum teaches participants how to take control of their asthma, and is based on national best practices for asthma care. Breathe Well, Live Well is the only program available nationwide that has shown to result in less severe asthma, fewer respiratory problems, and a better ability to stick to treatment plans. Participation includes the Breathe Well, Live Well Asthma Education workbook, available in digital or hard copy format in five languages. C o m m u n i t y : Community is critical for families living with asthma, so the program includes complimentary membership in the Patient & Caregiver Network, which provides free resources, education, and access to emerging research like clinical trials. In addition, people who sign up for the Asthma Lung Health Navigator program will receive a free air cleaner to help improve their indoor air quality (limited time only and while supplies last). To learn more and to sign up, visit Lung.org/navigator. There is no cure for asthma.

Hoe & Tell

By Shirley Buller
“Master Gardner”

The hummers have arrived and added some excitement to our morning coffee pause. Such tiny beautiful birds, always on the go, looking for the choicest flowers to start their day. Right now they are working the pentas in the pots and a bed of lantana. Speaking of lantana, I picked up a flat of Heartland Lantana in early spring and along with white vinca, rudbeckia and blue salvia filled the gaps in the flower bed under our kitchen window. This combination has been stunning, unplanned and one I will repeat again. Printed a picture and tucked it in my gardening notebook, along with the plant tags. I mentioned this notebook that contains suggestions, tags in zippered inserts and designs from magazines and other gardens before. If you feel like you keep planting the same old thing, that is not such a dumb idea. It is the plants that have earned their space through the years that keep showing up in different combinations in my garden. I still try new plants, watching the Proven Winners list each year, keeping up with the newest but relying on the tried and true. August changes a gardeners todo list. The summer blooming Rose of Sharon and hardy hibiscus are doing their job. Fall gardens should get in the ground, but wait until September to seed the lettuce, arugula and kale. The grasses are heading out, but the daylilies are starting their dormancy period and looking pretty ratty. Remove the spent bloom stems and cut back the dying foliage. Keep up a regular watering schedule, even though they look like they don't deserve it. Lilacs, redbuds and crabapple trees are working hard to grow buds for next springs bloom period. It is dry and any tree less than five years old need extra hydration. Stop fertilizing warm season grass, but in a month the first feeding on cool season grass should be applied. Buffalo and Bermuda turf will start slowing down due to the shorter days that signal. It is the best time of the whole year to plants trees. The soil is warm enough to start the rooting process but the hot, dry windy days will get less and less. We need rain badly. The wells are working hard to keep up with the fall harvests that are filling out ears and those beautiful red milo fields cause us to pause on our six mile trip to town. The raspberries are producing enough to think about jams and pies. The brown thrashers are almost putting us out of blackberries. No matter how devious we get, they soon figure it out. Spread the berries on a large cookie sheet and quickly freeze them. Store them in freezer bags and plan to use in baking and salads all winter long. Finding this new variety “Caroline” has put us back in the berry business and we are grateful for the gardener who shared the information with us a couple of years ago.
