Here we are...another election season...with the General Election closing in. I can always tell when it's Election Season...my mail box fills up with flyers of nobody that I am interested in voting for. It's tough following the Primary knowing that neither of the candidates for Governor that made it through are worth my vote. I have a hard time voting for the candidate from my political party because he has made it clearly abundant that the only things that matter to him are platform issues that are killing our party...and his own personal needs and those that finance him. On the other side...she's so busy wanting to fund most things that I am against (except legalized marijuana...it's a state revenue thing for me...I don't use nor do I have a cause to use) as well as standing for the foundation priorities that are killing her party as well. If I vote party line...then it's more of the same of the crap I am growing real tired of, but if I cross the isle to the other side...it's much of what I could never in good conscience give a crap about.

Since I brought up marijuana...let me touch briefly on what I see there...even as a non-user. I see the health benefits in regard to pain that so many out there could utilize. I see the revenue benefits that could seriously benefit the State (and don't hit me up with the whole law enforcement and treatment issues that conservatives like to throw around...it's just not factual). I see the alternative crop opportunities for agricultural dependent state...as well as the legally entrepreneurial opportunities available for those wanting to advance their future. I see each state that surrounds ours has already taken the steps needed to grasp the benefits of legalized marijuana. Don't kid yourselves...marijuana is already here, but we are so busy burying that stick further up our arses that we don't actually take the time to look at the benefits that these other states have grasped.

On the federal side of the General Election...once again we are forced decide which evil is the best for our state in regard to the Senate race. On one hand we have one candidate that is so blatantly socialist that the only thing he has is to stir up constituents against the one Senator that does care about the important issues facing this state...the Farm Bill...and Healthcare. That said, he needs to quit blindly pushing issues/bills that sound good on paper, but actually don't work in real life. The most recent was pushing an issue that would provide good money to rural hospitals (which should have included our own) without actually defining what it means to be a rural hospital and in the end run, earmarking these monies for much bigger and less rural hospitals. From what I understand, our local hospital will actually take a hit rather than a dividend when all is said and done...we need to do better.

A lot of things have been stirred up against this candidate (most recently at the State Fair) for his previous business practices. I don't know a business out there that doesn't take legal action when it comes to collections...but apparently on the socialist platform all those services should be free or at the minimum the financial obligations not held accountable. And they wonder why he doesn't do actual community forums anymore following that fiasco in Oakley that showed more Johnson County vehicles in the parking lot than locals for a community forum. From some that was there...he was beat up from get to go by liberals that yes...he called them rude and left the forum. The one negative point I can agree with...if you are going to represent this state at any level (even Federal)...you should reside in this state. The State has statutes that require local elected officials to live within the borders of where they govern...the same should exist for Federal officials.

Good luck making up your minds in regard to the direction you see this state going in the near future...it's gonna be a tough one.
